

STELLA: Oh no! But your mom presumably kept the jewelry. Does she let you borrow that?

KATE: Oh, yeah. When I was a little girl, there was this necklace she had that was my favorite. I would wear it around the house. It was a Victorian choker with pearls and a diamond center. Two years ago for Christmas, I opened up a present and she had given it to me. I cried and cried.

STELLA: How amazing. That's lovely.

KATE: The thing I love about opening my jewelry box, although I'm like this about clothes too, is that I know where everything came from and everything means something. Like this Loree Rodkin ring I'm wearing—I bought it for Chris. He wore it for a really long time, and then he saw somebody else wearing the same one ... and he never put it on again! I just loved it so much, I kept it for myself. But I'm like that about clothes too. I remember where I bought everything.

STELLA: Me too. Our memories are shot in every other area of our lives, but we know where we got our jewels, and we know where we got our clothes! So, educate us now—what are some style tips you've picked up along the way?

KATE: I discovered these great undergarments I can't live without called Nearly Nude.

STELLA: Yes, that's what we use on runway models.

KATE: They're so great. And you can wear them under any dress; they're really thin. Also, Wolford makes a kind of slip that holds you in. It's a little expensive, but women should invest in that! I don't go anywhere without Calvin Klein strapless bras, and since I wear a lot of short skirts, I always have ...

STELLA: Liposuction?

KATE: Ha! I do. I take my lipo kit everywhere. No, I'm never
